Globalizing Curriculum Innovations and Challenges: Teaching, Assessment, and Leadership in the 21st Century Learning

Spaces: An International Field/Institutional Visit for Educators and Administrators

Activity Synopsis

Education has a crucial role to play in shaping the societal transitions necessary to adjust to the Fourth Industrial Revolution (4IR). As it faces the volatile, uncertain, complex, and ambiguous (VUCA) world, the curriculum in the 21st century demands that education leaders be adaptive. Research suggests that the academic environment, together with its leaders, requires preparation of teachers, school heads, principals, and learning administrators for an evidence-based teaching practice in improving the delivery of instruction. In a study conducted by Alegado (2018), the trend of results of the National Achievement Test (NAT) is slowly declining in the past decade. It was strongly observed that the declining results can be attributed to the mismatch between instructional delivery and the expected competencies to be developed by students in the 21st-century environment.

In addition, educational leaders are also urged to influence policy directions with research-based evidence and factual information in the decision-making process (Gleason, 2018). Moreover, as stated in Department of Education (Philippines) (DepEd) Order 24, s. 2020 on national adoption and implementation of the Philippine professional standards for school heads, the Department of Education recognizes the importance of professional standards in the continuing professional development and advancement of school heads based on the principles of career-long learning.

Furthermore, in DepEd Order 83, s. In 2012, on implementing guidelines on the revised school-based management (SBM) framework, assessment process, and tool (APAT) to further strengthen the school-based management (SBM) practice and re-emphasize the centrality of the learners and the involvement of relevant basic community education service delivery, the Department of Education (DepEd) embarked on revisiting the SBM framework, assessment process, and tool to improve on already recognized successful SBM practices across the regions. Thus, the training aims to provide the necessary tools, approaches, and strategies founded on concrete evidence in crafting decisions in achieving effective learning among students. These tools will aid educators and school leaders to be able to observe, analyze, and understand issues with the goal of meaningfully confronting and resolving the challenges in the school landscape from a global context and provide leadership solutions with a local perspective.
