Common Oral Diseases can be prevented, hence the importance of oral health awareness can be disseminated with the help of volunteer workers and the used of appropriate technology that is accepted and practiced by individuals and families. There is a need for an effective health promotion and advocacy program in the prevention and control of oral diseases and to achieve this; there is a need to established linkages with the Government and NGO's into a broader network for a continuing dental health education that will start for an advocacy as well as prevention and control. The community should be tapped for generation of manpower and resources for collaborative information.

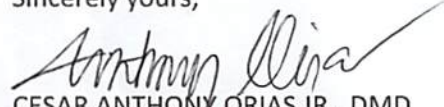

It is in this context that DepEd teachers , DCC Workers and BNS are being tapped as alternate and advocates who can assist villages and schools on certain dental problems for a limited services as far as preventive and control is concern.
